South's Stand the Negro.

A NOTION OF NEGRO UNRESTFUL ATTEMPT TO HURRY A WEDNESDAY.

Mrs. Francis Hill, a wealthy lady of the Westchester county, has for the past two or three years been sorely perplexed with domestic servants, and very recently resolved upon making a new departure. Her domestic help had always been white, but finding that when a new nationality was about equally balanced in the scale of dishonesty Mrs. Hill determined to procure colored help. She sent down south for an untried, honest, southern darky, and in due time received a notice that "a very likely" young female had been selected, and would arrive on such a steamer from Wilmington, N. C. The young woman arrived last Wednesday. She was ten degrees blacker than a thunder cloud, looked stout, and wore the regulation plantation frock and cowhide shoes. She was just such a girl as one might see in southern cotton-fields. She was not nineteen years old, could not read or write, and seemed so remarkably stupid that one could not but be struck by her. The girl was taken to Brooklyn, furnished with a tidy outfit, and informed that she could have a good home if she would consent to learn the arts of housework. The next day the girl was taken to Rye, and Mrs. Hill initiated her into the mysteries of the kitchen. The new girl was apt and willing, and apparently anxious to learn. On Monday Mrs. Henry Quinn, Mrs. Hill's daughter, drew from a bank $500 in gold with which to pay taxes the next day. The money was taken in a small hand-bag, which was locked and left in a bureau-drawer. Next day $300 of this fund had evaporated. The bag was locked, but the package was open. Search was made everywhere for the money, but could not be found. The girl, who was called Sarah Cooney, was asked about the money, and she stood in blank astonishment.

"Bress de lamb! I knows nothin' 'bout it," she said; "never in my life I see so much money." After nearly a week of every nook and cranny which could be thought of, the girl herself being equally interested in the hunt, Sarah was severely cross-questioned as to who had been seen around the premises. She had seen nobody; but she said that she was an expert in the voodoo art and that she could tell who the thief was. She went to the kitchen at the suggestion of Mr. Quinn and Mrs. Hill to invite the aid of the voodoo Queen. The negroess drew herself into a chair, made a few passes over her head, pretended to be asleep, and then mumbled some unintelligible words, which sounded like "Noodoodoo, hoodoo, hoodoo, hoodoo." Then she got up and staggered to the door, beckoning Mr. Quinn to follow.

"That," she said, pointing toward a small but occupied by a respectable Irishman and his family, "am de man. He am de man. De money him hid somewhere." It was ascertained that the man had not been in the neighborhood for a day or two, and could not, therefore, be the thief. The next move was to summon Officer William H. Stillwell from Portchester, who suggested that the girl was the thief. He questioned her closely, but she knew all knowledge. Finally, she went into one of her fraudulent voodoo trances, and told him that the thief had hidden the money. It was in the table end of the roof of an extension to the main building, she said, and she had seen it there. She was accurately described. Search was made, and there was a little money found. But there was a little tell-tale in the package which showed that Sarah was the thief. The girl was nicely nestled in a nest of cotton, and among the coins was found little curls of woolly hair, which she had hidden. Two ten-dollar gold pieces were neatly rolled up in this package and placed at the very bottom of the package. Other little curls of negro hair were found in the cotton, proving beyond a doubt that the girl was the thief. As Mrs. Hill was informed of the results of the search, she was very angry against the girl the officer thought it best to get her out of the county. He therefore brought her to New York, and yesterday shipped her back to Wilmington. Mrs. Hill is of the opinion now that southern negroes are just as dishonest as northern ones. —New York Herald.

Mr. Harlow's Idea.

SOME OF THE BEAUTIFUL AND DREADFUL THINGS SEEN BY THE ESTHETE.

With the suddenness of an apparition Oscar Wilde appeared before the audience at Association Hall yesterday afternoon, the knuckles of his long, thin fingers, his floating hair, his two awfully hairy beard and the world in a majestic pose, looking for all the world the perfect embodiment of an electrified seventeenth-century figure. Standing thus, in his black velvet jacket and knee breeches and silk stockings, with a cascade of hair, and a beard, and a mustache, the several hundred ladies present and score or more of men scrutinized him from his nose to patent-leathers to the "cowlick" on the left of his plumbeous part in his hair, as if he was a piece of antiquity and a very revival. The esthete did not seem to see a very ordinary white stone pitcher by the handle and pour into a commonplace flint-glass tumbler about two gills of simple Schuykill water, which he absorbed in the course of the afternoon in two very healthy gulps. During this little performance, he had time to twist the corners of his mouth down and compose themselves for the talk on "the practical application of the principles of the aesthetic theory to the exterior and interior house decoration, with observations upon dress and personal ornaments."

Second Sight in an Ohio Man.

(Detroit Free Press.)

It was also an Ohio man who, when a terrible storm set in one night, rushed into the house of a neighbor and cried out: "Jones, this is the ending of war!" "I am afraid so—I am afraid so!" was the reply. "And what shall we do?" "Make our peace with Heaven." The wind blew still stronger, the house began to shake, and the excited man exclaimed: "Jones, you lost five bushels of wheat last fall." "Yes." "And you have your suspicions?" "I have. The man who took my wheat had better own up." "Can you forgive him?" "I can." "Well."

Flowers.

THE WIND suddenly dropped, and after a look through the window the conscience-stricken man turned and finished: "Yes, I'll ever meet him I'll advise him to cat around."

Wood and Coal.

OF ONE FACT I am convinced, and that is St. Jacobs Oil does cure rheumatism. My left shoulder was so stiff with rheumatism in my left shoulder and right arm, that I was unable to attend to my duties, and lay many a night unable to sleep on account of terrible pains. A few weeks ago a severe attack of this trouble struck me, and this time I concluded to try the St. Jacobs Oil in its merits. I freely confess that the result has completely astonished me. The first application relieved the pain very materially, and the continued use of only two bottles has completely cured me of this chronic evil, and that after the most eminent physicians and their prescriptions had been of no avail. I therefore consider it a duty to publish the above for the benefit of all sufferers with rheumatism and kindred complaints.—G. A. HELMAN, Editor Republican, Pittsburg, Pa.
